December 13, 2012

Principal's Pad- In my 23 years working in our school district, the last two weeks before winter break have always been the most challenging in regard to behaviors. Monday and Tuesday were very busy days with a lot of behaviors that were not good, but yesterday was much improved. I really want all of our kids in school every day, however, I do sometimes have to make the hard decision to send our students home for a while when they are unable to have enough self-control. Many of our students do the right thing all of the time and it is not fair that bad behaviors take away time and learning opportunities for other students. We will do our best to help all of our students behave appropriately, try and figure out ways for them to improve when they make mistakes, and help them make better choices that will help them in school and life. I'm hopeful that next week will be great and we'll end the 2012 year on a very positive note.

Earlier this week, we had several Marshfield students come and talk to our students about a group they have started called Friends of Rachel. They are trying to create a 'chain reaction' of kindness that will spread throughout our schools and our community. I was very excited that we had some of our 7th grade students come talk with me wanting to start a Friends of Rachel group here at Sunset. They've already organized a sign-up sheet with many students signed up and a first meeting date the week we come back to school. This is a great thing for our school and I'm very impressed with the great leadership and organization from our 7th grade students who got this started. I'll keep you posted as this group develops. Thanks for the great work!

Have a great weekend,
